Property Highlights

The Alberta Government Telephones (AGT) Building was erected during the construction spurt of the late 1920s. Considered very modern, the AGT Building featured such innovations as the first automatic elevators in the province and improved fireproofing. The building is an excellent example of the commercial architectural style of the time in which elements derived from the Gothic Revival (such as the buttresslike piers and the crenelated parapet) are combined with geometric modern forms, making this building an Art Deco icon in Downtown Calgary.

The four-storey building is recently renovated, creating a unique character space with exposed brick and beam finishings. Conveniently located in the heart of Downtown Calgary, the Telephone Building is one block to the LRT line, and a four minute walk to Stephen Avenue, Calgary's iconic main street with a large variety of retailers and amenities.
